Biography

Michael J. Barresi focuses his practice on all aspects of patent litigation in U.S. district courts including pre-suit investigations, discovery, Markman hearings, expert witness discovery and testimony, and trial. He has litigated complex patent litigation cases involving a wide range of technologies including internet technology, as well as in the life sciences, biotechnology, and the pharmaceutical industry. Drawing on his degree in biochemistry, Michael brings deep and broad technical acumen to cases requiring knowledge of small molecules, biologics, antibodies, and other compounds that form the basis of his clients' products.

Michael has experience working with Fortune 500 companies, small and mid-sized companies, universities, foreign entities and individuals. He manages and helps build clients' intellectual property portfolios. He has written, negotiated, and reviewed technology agreements, including technology transfer agreements, consulting agreements, confidentiality agreements, software license agreements, assignments, and others. Michael has been a member of the patent bar since 2013.
